👋

Hello, my name is Luan.

I like to say that I fell into the programming world by accident.

I discovered this world when I started my Information Systems degree. While researching what course to take, I came across this one and understood at the time that it involved working with computers. As a child, I loved tinkering with settings and downloading different programs from the old "Baixaki" site to test them out.

In college, I discovered that websites and systems are built with code, something I had never seen before. This led me to dive deeper into gaining practical knowledge in the field, and everything happened very naturally.

Today, I am passionate about creating solutions that add value to the end user, creating seamless experiences, and supporting product decision-making.

Beyond coding, I'm an outgoing and communicative person, though a bit reserved initially—at least until I get comfortable, haha. I enjoy going out with friends, am a series addict, and a wine lover, although I don't know much about the subject. I also have a cat named Arya Stark, who sometimes thinks my couch is a White Walker...

My musical taste is quite eclectic, ranging from Ana Carolina to Anitta, with Menos é Mais and Linkin Park in between.

In a nutshell, this is who I am :)
